After resting a short time, Blondin again made his appearance, and after walking a short distance, again stood on his head, with his face toward Mr. Evans's camera.

He then returned, was blindfolded with a handkerchief, and, with the exception of his arms, completaly covered with a sack. He then proceeded to the American side. During his passage he stopped four times, and stood on his head once, the sack to the contrary notwithstanding. He reached the American shore safely, and was greeted with the plaudits of the throng. His performance, in some respects, was more daring than any of his previous feats.

On the Fourth of July Blondin advertises to appear as Jocke, with slack-rope performances in the center of his narrow bridge. In the evening he will start from the American side loaded with fire-works of every description, and, completely surrounded with brilliant colored fires, will, return from the Canada side with a beautiful display of fire-works attached to the wheelbarrow.

Destructive Storm in Holland-Noble Con duct of Lord and Lady Napier.

Much damage was recently caused by the Whit-sunday storm in the Netherlands. In the beautiful wood of Hague some three hundred trees were uprooted, and proportionate damage has been done throughout the whole extent of the country. Immense losses have also been sustained by the marine assurance offices, and many portions of wrecked vessels, the crews of which have disappeared, were driving hourly on the shores. On the little steamer plying between Rotterdam and Chapell about fifty persons lost their lives, the ateamer having been overturned. The Scotch steamer Therese, is on shore at Scheveningen. Her passengers and crew were saved with great difficulty.

When they reached the shore, many of them with only their night clothes, and all else lost, they found no one able to understand them—only the wrackers whose object was to plunder them of whatever they might be able to pick up. In this dilemma an English gentleman appeared on the beach, and rendered great service to the poor creatures by providing them with whatever comforts could be commanded. He sent his carriage to fetch a poor woman, imperfectly clad, with her infant child, and a kind-hearted lady to provide her with whatever she required. To this gentleman and lady, who most zealously endeavored to alleviate the distress of the poor ahip-wrecked passengers and crew, great praise is due, but it was an action, which might be expected of Lord and Lady Napier.

EXTRAOBDINARY ABBENCE OF MIND.—This anecdots is old enough to be allowed repose, but yet it ought not to be buried. Talking of "absence of mind," said the Rev. Sidney Smith, "the oddest instance happened to me ones, in forgetting my own name. I knocked at a door in London, and asked if Mrs. B. was at home. 'Yes, Sir. Pray what name shall I say?' I looked in the man's face astonished—what is my name? I believe the man thought me mad; but it is literally true, that during the space of two or three minutes, I had no more idea of who I was than if I never existed. I did not know whether I was a dissenter or a layman; I felt as Sternhold or Hopkins. At last, to my great relief, it flashed across me that I was Sidney Smith. I heard, also, of a clergyman who went jogging along the road until he came to a turnpike. 'What it nav'. EXTRAOBDINARY ABSENCE OF MIND,-Thi cently set on fire by a negro prisoner, who was burnt to death, and the building entirely destroyed. Lord Haytesbury, who has just died in England, was one of the oldest diplomatic servants of that Government. He was in his eighty-first year. man who went jogging along the road until he came to a turnpike. 'What is to pay?' Pay, Sir! for what?' asked the turnpike man. 'Why, my horse, to be sure.' 'Your horse, Sir?' what horse?' Here is no horse, Sir!' No horse! God bless me, 'said he, suddenly looking down between his legs, 'I thought! was on horseback.'?

RAPID GROWTH OF THE CITY OF BROOKLYN RAPID GROWTH OF THE CITY OF BROOKLYN. Forty years ago the city of Brooklyn, near New York, was a pleasant little village of two or three thousand inhabitants. The Directory of that city just published contains four hundred and seventy-three pages of closely printed names and residences. The entire number of names is fifty-three thousand five hundred, and supposing these to be heads of families, and allowing each family to consist of five persons, the population will be nearly two hundred and seventy thousand. There is supposed to have been an increase of twenty-five thousand within the last year. There are one hundred and fifty-six places of religious worship, giving church accommodations to a little over one-third the entire population.

Perhaps the prosperity of Brooklyn may be attributed in some measure to the immense number of popular Smiths who make it their abode. There are about seven hundred Smiths in the city of Brooklyn, of whom eighty-five rejoice in the name of John Smith.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES KEAN IN ENGLAND.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean have lately been giving performances in Gloucester, England. A critic of that city gave a sketch of Hamlet, as viewed from behind the scenes. Mr. Kean is represented as rishing excitedly from behind the stage after giving "Polonius" his quietus, and becoming suddenly calm and playful, patting a little drummer-boy on the head, and conversing blandly with all around him. At the end of another act Mr. Kean is seen to receive a glass of water from the hands of his fair young daughter, whose filial attention he rewards with a loving glance! Unfortunately, the fair daughter was on that occasion, as in most others similar, sitting in Unfortunately, the fair daugater was on that in occasion, as in most others similar, sitting in her private box; she never goes upon the stage, and the lady who handed the tragedian a glass of water was Mrs. Kean's mand. Consequently, if the "critic" was not drawing on his imagination the case looks a little awkward for the "Hamlet" of the evening.

Novel Fight Between an Editor and a Lawyer.—The editor of the Cayuga Lake (N. Y.) Recorder says he was assaulted, a few days since, by a "Learned Barrister of Union Springs," with stones, as the weightiest arguments in his possession. The editor answered with a similar argument, but, failing to repulse his assailant, he next tried a pint bottle, but here, he says, he made a great mistake, as his fee had from long use become so much accustomed to bottles that this sort of weapon did not trouble him. The editor, like a skilful general, now changed his tactics, and poured upon the counseller a shower of—water. This muceuver proved entirely successful, and the enemy beat a precipitate and inglorious retreat. He had never used any water, and could not stand it. NOVEL FIGHT BETWEEN AN EDITOR AND of Honduras. They purchased a schooner and engaged a crew, who, upon their return to San Francisco, gave these particulars to the reporter of the Times:

The schooner Santiage, which had been purchased and fitted out by the free-lovers, or rather by Mr. Lewelling, the chief man among them, left San Francisco on or about the 5th of October last, having on board, beside the captain and crew, a company of ten men, five women, and six or seven children, who were intended to be the pioneers of a colony of the harmonial brotherhood in the State of Honduras.

The passengers during the voyage had their separate rooms, but spent much of their time together discussing spiritualism, and an ism which they called "harmonious diet." In these discussions the women played a princi-which they called "harmonious diet." In these discussions the women played a principal part, particularly one who dressed in the extreme of the Bloomer fashion—Mrs. T. also Dr. T., the fit husband of a Bloomer wife.

The colonists proceeded to Tiger Island, their general readcrevous in the Gulf of Fonseca. Thence they made excursions to all the islands in the neighborhood, for the purpose of finding a place of settlement; but they did not suit themselves except on the main land, at a point on the Como River, about sixty miles in the interior. They had boasted that their diet would preserve them from sixtness; but before the vessel left on her return, nearly all had been sick, and there was very great dauger of the few who remained being exterminated by the fever of the country.

Fraudulent Marriago Set Aside in New York. The Supreme Court of New York recently The Supreme Court of New York recently confirmed the judgment of the referee in the case of Agnes Kidder is. Walter Kidder, annulling the marriage of the parties upon the ground of fraud on the part of the defendant, it appeared that the parties were married in the month of July last, the lady being then just turned fourteen, and the defendant being about twenty-one. The lady was the daughter of a wealthy ship-owner, and the defendant a waiter in a dining saloon. The parties became acquainted at a boarding-house, where the lady was temporarily staying with her mother and sister during the absence of her father. On the day of the marriage, a girl named Emma, residing in the house, induced plaintiff, with the consent of her mother, to visit New York, promising to return the same evening.

access, induced plantiff, with the consent of her mother, to visit New York, promising to return the same evening.

Shortly after going out, they were met by Kidder, who took the parties to a store in Cherry-street, at which place he poured some thing, which she thought was cologne, on plaintiff 's handkerchief, but it turned out to be a narcotic. The parties then went to a clergyman, who had been visited the day before by Kidder, and induced by his statements to agree to perform the marriage ceremony. The next day plaintiff acquainted her mother with the marriage, at the same time imploring forgiveness, as she did not know what she was about at the time. Defendant had tried to obtain a consent to the ratification of the marriage since, but plaintiff wholly refused to consent thereto, and instituted the proceedings which have resulted in restoring her to freedom from the claims of the shrewd but observed one dish-washer.

Gossip About the Duke of Brabant.—There is a bit of gossip going about in the English papers to this effect: "The Duke of Brabant recently made a visit to the Sultan of Turkey. His majesty, desiring to show much honor to his illustrious guest, dispatched a royal collation of chibouques and narghiles to Emirghan, for the Duke's use during his stay. Those, it is said, amounted to no fewer than seventeen pipe-sticks, with the costliest amber mouth-pieces, all diamond-mounted Several of them were the very ne plus ultra of Turkish art, and the Duke, it is said, gave utterance to his admiration in terms loud and explicit. The Turkish monarch at once said, in the Oriental style, "They are yours." The Duke took the phrase literally, and packed up the whole array, valued at about thirty-five thousand dollars. ve thousand dollars.

A MAN OF PLUCK OVERBOARD.—After the fine steamer Pacific had left Evansville, Ind., a few miles, the other day, the ringing of her bell and the sudden lowering of her yawl attracted the attention of spectators on the wharf, who soon perceived that a man had fallen overboard. It was some time before the yawl was got ready, during which the man rapidly floated down the river, though manfally exerting his powers of swimming to stem the current. A skiff started out from the shore toward him, and reached him a short time before the yawl; but, although he short time before the yawl; but, although he had been for twenty minutes buffeting the carrent of the Ohio, he refused to get into it, but waited until the yawl came up, when, getting in, he immediately manned an oar and commenced rowing. Such an exhibition of nerve and pluck is quite-refreshing.

THE COST OF ENTERTAINING THE JAPANESE IN THIS COUNTRY.—It is stated by reliable authority, that the cost of bringing the Japanese from San Francisco to Washington, and entertaining them there during twenty-six days' stay, and cost of Government train to Philadelphia, amounted to $14,000, the items being as follows: Transportation across the Isthmus, $4,000, entertainment at Washington during twenty-six days' stay, including hack hire, wines, &c., $7,400; charter of steamboat, government trains, &c., $2,600. The cost of entertaining the Japanese in Philadelphia for seven days will, it is said, amount to $15,000, being $5,000 more than the appropriation, and over $7,000 more than during their whole stay in Washington.

Japanese Baths — Cleanlinese of the Profle.—The Japanese of all classes are remarkably cleanly in their houses and persons. They bathe frequently, and there are many public bath-houses in the towns open to all customers for a fee generally equal to one-eighth of a cent, where both sexes bathe together entirely nude, without, apparently, the slightest idea of impropriety. In warm weather persons of both sexes may be seen in the primitive condition, bathing themselves in large tubs before the doors of their houses.

A CHILD ACCIDENTALLY SHOT .- A young A CHILD ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.—A young daughter of Riley Tait, of Wilcox County. Ala., recently found in his house an old pistol that had not been used for some length of time, and thinking to amuse her little sister, snapped the pistol in her face. After enapping once or twice the pistol fired, and the ball shot through the baby's hand, and entered the forehead just above the eye, Strange to say, the wound did not cause instant death, but at hist accounts the child was expected to die hourly. was expected to die hourly.

NORWEGIAN MODE OF KEEPING ACCOUNTS. Norweglan Mode of Keeping Accounts.— The process of keeping accounts among the Norway humbermen is of unique style. The book-keeper, after comparing accounts with the workman, sends him to the cashier for his wages, with the amount due him chalked on his back; and when the cashier has paid him, he takes his receipt himself, by rubbing off his chalk marks.

Washington, June 24.—Last night a procession was formed at the illuminated Douglas head-quarters, and proceeded to the railroad station to receive the Illinois and other Baltimore Convention delegates, who were accompanied by the Great Western Band, and came by a special train. They repaired to the residence of Mr. Douglas, and complimented him with a serenade and huzzas.

In acknowledging these evidences of their friendship, he said:

The circumstances under which this wast crowd has assembled, spontaneously and without previous notice, demonstrates an earnestness of feeling which fills my heart with gratitude. disappointed men, willing to malign his character.

The tyrannical star chamber was not worse than this alur has been, nothing like it since the revolutionary days of Robespierre. Should the proceedings of the Committee be sanctioned by the House the Constitution will have been violated, and the Executive be no longer an independent branch of the Government, and the worst fears of the early patriots and statesmen will have been realized. thorities.

Does not this line of policy look to disunion? [Cries of "Yes."]

o the request of the Senate to appoint mother Committee of Conference on the confide Deficiency Bill. SEWING MACHINE! Postoffice Deficiency Bill. The President sent in a message notifying the House that he signed certain bills, including that making appropriations for civil expenses, with a protest against the clause designating Captain Meigs as superintendent of the expenditure of $500,000 for the completion of the Washington Aqueduct. He does not believe it was the intention of Congress to interfere with the Constitutional rights of the President, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, to order Captain Meigs elsewhere, and send him away to superintend the erection of fortifications, or other work. It was evident to him that Congress intended nothing more than to express a decided opinion that Captain Meigs should be continued in employment to superintend the Aqueduct. Is the appropriation constitutional, and will it fall if he should not think proper and expedient to regard this designa-

He now desired to express no opinion, but the question shall be carefully considered necessary. Another message from the President recapitulated the grounds of his protest of March last, against the proceedings of the Covode Committee.

The charges against him being vague, and expressed in equivocal terms, he did not for a moment entertain a doubt as to the result. He did not believe it possable that there existed a man who could basely perjure himself. The proceedings of the House, he repeats, are violative of the rights of a co-ordinate branch of the Government, and which, if suforced, would establish a dangerous precedent. The House had acted without constitutional warrant, and in a manner tending to degrade the Presidential office, and render it unworthy of acceptance by an honorable man.

constitutional warrant, and in a manner tending to degrade the Presidential office, and render it unworthy of acceptance by an honorable man.

The accusatory resolution was nothing more or less than that the President has used corrupt messas to accompilab certain purposes. By what authority did the House undertake to investigate the Exicutive's course as to the Lecompton Constitution, to pry into our foreign relations, assailing our Mexican Minister as to the Tehuantepec Route, to investigate removals from office, notwithstanding the power of removal belongs to the President under the Constitution and was so decided by the first Congress, accordingly has ever since been so exercised. There was ne authority for the Committees to investigate the subject of printing the Postoffice blanks, because that question had previously been examined by two other Committees. The President objected to the vindictive manner in which the witnesses were examined. The first information he received of any testimony that would or could injuriously effect him was published in a New York journal, but which was disproved by most respectable witnesses.

The telegraph, however, was silent as to the contradiction. He says that only such dispatches were published as would reflect on his character, thus inflicting most flagrant injustice, and that different versions were given of private conversations, when there was no opportunity to refute them. Members of the Cabinet and others were summoned to discover, if possible, something to his discredit. THE MACHINE HAS BEEN PRONOUNCED by all competent judges, who have

Adam and Eve in Eden.—How long did Adam remain in Paradise? Until he was mairied. Same case with many others, says the Boston Fost, who, by-the-bye, was never married, and therefore is no judge of the matter. At any rate, Adam seemed to think the woman a good bargain; and he certainly made a good thing of his fall, in a wordly point of view, for he exchanged a flower-garden for a universe. Eve, too, got some compensation for the loss of her innocence, namely, the privilege of dressing, which, judging by her daughters, must have been a matter of profound felicitation. A letter from An long in the Opinions of Turin, states that the Irish recruits there were disgusted both with their quarters and the ragged fellows they were henceforth to consort with; that to quiet them, they were sent to an inn instead of to the barracks; but that they, nevertheless, applied to the British Consul for his intervention, who, however, told them plainly they were no longer British subjects, since they had taken service under the Pope.
